

State of Washington
Insurance Commissioner's
Annual Report
2007

Mike Kreidler
Insurance Commissioner

About this report:

The preamble to the Washington State Insurance Code (Chapter 48, RCW) says:

"The business of insurance is one affected by the public interest, requiring that all persons be actuated by good faith, abstain from deception, and practice honesty and equity in all insurance matters. Upon the insurer, the insured, and their representatives rests the duty of preserving inviolate the integrity of insurance."

This report, which is required under RCW 48.02.170, includes the statistical summaries compiled in the insurance marketplace in Washington. The statistical tables themselves are extracted from exhibits filed with the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC). While this data is historically reliable and complete, any statistical project of this magnitude may contain errors, and neither the NAIC nor the Commissioner makes representations or warranties with respect to the accuracy or the completeness of the data and statistics in this report.

About the artist:

The front cover art is a watercolor painting by Lichiou Lee. Lichiou is the Health Actuary with the Office of the Insurance Commissioner. She has been with the OIC since 1995.

Legislative successes pave way for improvement

The last year has been an extremely productive and successful one for the Office of the Insurance Commissioner. Following are some of the highlights.

First, thanks to the Legislature, our office regained the authority to regulate the individual health insurance market. We can now ensure that people who buy insurance on their own enjoy the same protections as people who are covered through their employers, and are not subjected to unjustified rate increases.

We also had a legislative win in the area of title insurance. After investigations revealed the widespread use of illegal gifts and kickbacks by title insurers to steer business, I convened a task force to study the industry and suggest improvements. Based on those recommendations, we proposed – and the Legislature passed – a new law that will provide more effective regulation of this very important, but little-understood insurance market.

2007 was a good year for the medical malpractice market. After weathering a hard insurance cycle for several years, it finally took a turn in the right direction. As evidence, the state's largest writer of medical malpractice cut premiums by up to 20 percent for physicians with good claims experience, and reported record profits for the year.

On another front, after converting from an outdated mainframe computer system to a more nimble business-based model in 2006, our office now has the capacity to refine many of our business practices and better serve our customers. We have already started upgrading and adding online services to make life easier for the more than 100,000 agents and brokers that we regulate.

Speaking of agents and brokers, we're converting – with the Legislature's approval – to the single-producer model destined to become the national standard for license regulation.

We also continued to refine our market conduct oversight of insurance companies to a more proactive, consumer-driven market analysis process, moving from cyclical examinations to real-time analysis and intervention.

2008 promises increased opportunity for continued progress toward guaranteed health benefits (and peace of mind) for all Washingtonians. I urge you to check back with us throughout the year to see our progress. You'll find up-to-date information and easy access on our Web site at www.insurance.wa.gov.

Sincerely,

Mike Kreidler

2007 Insurance Commissioner's Annual Report

About the agency:

The Office of the Insurance Commissioner (OIC) oversees the insurance industry to ensure that insurance companies, agents and brokers follow the rules and that Washington citizens get what they pay for.

The first state legislature created the OIC during the 1889-1890 session. At first, the office was a branch of the Secretary of State's office and its main function was simply to register insurance companies that wanted to do business in Washington.

In 1907, the OIC became a separate agency and the people of Washington elected their first insurance commissioner. Commissioners are elected every four years.

Unlike most state agencies, the OIC is not funded by public tax dollars. Insurance companies pay an administrative fee to cover all of its costs.

Over the years, the commissioner's scope has increased dramatically. In addition to registering insurance companies, the office also:

- Answers questions, provides information, investigates claims and addresses problems for more than 100,000 people a year who need help with their insurance.
- Tests, licenses and monitors the almost 98,000 individuals and businesses that handle insurance in Washington state.
- Licenses and audits the 56 insurance companies that are based in Washington state to make sure they follow all the rules.
- Collects about $450 million a year in taxes that fund a wide array of public services.
- Has built a statewide network of volunteers who provide individual education and assistance on health care issues to more than 23,000 people each year.
- Steps in and runs insurance companies that have severe financial troubles to make sure their customers aren't left to fend for themselves.
- Maintains more than 200 publications that explain the types of insurance that are available and help consumers decide what is right for them.

Anyone who has questions or concerns about their insurance can call the OIC at 1-800-562-6900.
